Caldwell lectures on backstage opera

By Tom Killen
Scribe Staff

A capacity audience waited in the Recital Hall of the Arts and Humanities Building Monday for the appearance of the short, rather plain woman who in recent years has attained the deification usually reserved for more vocal members of the sports and motion picture industries.

The occasion was the arrival of Sarah Caldwell to address the weekly session of Opera Institute and make final preparations for her production of Puccini's The Girl of The Golden West.

Ostensibly, Caldwell's lecture was to deal with the musical theatre of Puccini, but the framework was promptly discarded as she charmed the audience with her reflections on directing, producing, and dealing with critics.

"The Girl of The Golden West works very well today," she said in a deep, profundo voice. "Sometimes you rehearse a work and find that you really have to sell the performers on the merits of the piece."

"You soon begin to realize that if there are problems convincing the performers, there will be problems convincing the audience. Happily, there are no such problems in this production. The performers are having a grand time, and it's all I can do to get them off the stage."

The Girl of The Golden West is based on David Belasco's turn of the century western melodrama, and Caldwell said that every effort has been made to avoid the cliché.

"One of the problems in producing this work is that we have years of cowboy movies between us and Belasco," she said. "Some of the devices that were novel in Belasco's time have long since become cliché. There is a fight scene in the play, and I told my actors to be sure to knock down a table during the brawl. They promptly reminded me that in every Western, some cowboy knocks down a table. We are trying very hard in this production to do nothing that would disturb the air of reality that surrounds the work."

Preserving the aura of reality is one of the things Caldwell views as intrinsic to her role as director. "My duty as director is to make a work understandable to an audience, to communicate with them while maintaining the effect the composer desired," Caldwell said.

In an age of bogus press agency, Caldwell is that rarity—a genuine eccentric. When an opera critic chastised her for not using the proper incense in her recent production of Montezuma, Caldwell promptly sent him a sample of the odious substance with the message, "Perhaps now you will understand why I did not subject my audience to this odor."

Four years of study by Class of '76 degree candidates will climax in a commencement ceremony Sunday, May 16—a joyous day for relatives and students alike. But graduates may feel like children of woe on Monday, May 17, when they awaken to find themselves in the real, workaday world where a job is the key to survival. The Scribe would like to wish every candidate "Happy Job Hunting" and hopes the University's newest alumni will be able to live off their graduation gifts until that job is landed!

Sal Curiale's two month coaching of seventh grade students from a City junior high school will pay off today when the students present a Bicentennial Play here in Jacobson Wing 103. The play will demonstrate the public speaking ability and achievements of the Blackham students.

Curiale said he has been preparing the students since February. Each Wednesday he goes to the school and spends the morning working with them.

Nearly 100 students competed for the 12 spots during the original contest on April 7. At that time winners were awarded trophies and a representative from Senator Lowell Weicker's office presented the school a flag which flew over the Capital Building in Washington, D.C.

William Bissenden, president of Kappa Omega Epsilon, an honor society for Part-Time students, presented the school with a plaque which is on display in the school lobby.

Group members presented Curiale with a hand embroidered poster and a plaque which thanked him for "showing us the meaning of being an American."

The umpires waited for half an hour, then left—right before the equipment finally arrived. The Bridgeport Knights were awarded the game, with one run for each inning that was supposed to have been played, giving them a score of 7-0. Rose Weisse, who was to start on the mound, was named winning pitcher.

The afternoon was not a total loss, however, as the two teams eventually scrimmaged for four innings. Bridgeport coach Micki Stratton thought the two cancellations might have had a detrimental effect on the team. "You definitely have to have some kind of workout," she said. "You just get kind of rusty—and have to keep moving."

She remains optimistic about the tournament in New Jersey today. "The only people who will beat us is ourselves," she said.

"We have two or three hitters who are hitting over .300. Our pitcher, Jill MacDiarmid, is one of the best pitchers in the East Coast," she added.

The Bridgeport squad plays Trenton State College this morning. Whether they win or lose will determine whether they play the winner or loser of the Springfield (Mass.) vs. Brockport (NY) game.

Monday's game with Sacred Heart University, postponed because of rain, will be played at home on Friday, May 7. The Knights host Central Conn. at 3 p.m. in Seaside Park.

Stravropoulos takes reins of SCBOD

By Walter
Zaborowski
Scribe Staff

Fred Stravropoulos was elected president and six other positions were filled for the during elections of the Student Center Board of Directors (BOD) fall semester Monday night.

The new executive board will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. A general board session will follow at 9 p.m.

Stravropoulos told he may solve the problem of limited funds for his organization by imposing an activities fee on part-time students.

Others elected were: Sheri Lamer, vice-president internal;

Don Guy, vice-president external; Ina Ghaznavi, treasurer; Barbara Roos, recording secretary; and Sharon Behl, corresponding secretary. Frann Teplick was elected Parliamentarian.

In his speech to the board, Stravropoulos said, "I will meet with the responsible administrators and explore our growing problem with limited funds for this organization. An activities fee charge for part-time students may be one of the solutions."

Stravropoulos also said he would like to see more efficient use of BOD facilities in the Student Center. He said these include the video-tape network, the new light system, the cooler and "our programming office in Room 110 which is presently locked away from our use."

Stravropoulos called for good planning and a restructuring of the Constitution as a means to make BOD more efficient.

Three new BOD officers said they would like to change the general attitude of the Board. Stravropoulos said, "If elected president I do not intend to have an attitude of treating you (the general board) like mere workers, but as the decision makers."

Stravropoulos received 40 votes. Diane Brundage and Dick Nixon each received a vote; while there were six negative votes.

Sheri Lamer, vice-president internal said "there seems to be a gap between the executive and general board." She added she will try to bring everybody closer together. According to the BOD Constitution, the vice-president external is responsible for coordinating all committees and helping to coordinate the work of the President.

Lamer received 45 votes compared to Beth Benson's 1. There was an abstention.

Don Guy, vice-president external, said he hopes "there will not be as many personality conflicts as there were this year."

Guy defeated Frann Teplick, 19 to 17. Diane Brundage received 8 votes and Beth Banson, 3.

Running unopposed Ina Ghaznavi received only three negative votes.

Barbara Roos was elected Record Secretary with 28 votes. Others receiving votes included, Diane Brundage, 19; Sharon Behl, 2, and Sue Bannard, 1.

In the corresponding secretary contest Sharon Behl received 34 votes, and was followed by Debbie Ehnott with 13, Laura Levy with 2 and Joe Giusti, 1.

Frann Teplick won the Parliamentarian the position with 31 votes.

CORRECTION

In the April 6 issue of The Scribe it was incorrectly stated that Francis W. Dana, the new Dean of Admissions will also become director of financial aid. Although Dana will be Dean of Admissions, he will only be an advisor to financial aid.

University students recruit 77 freshmen for fall studies during three-day phonathon

By Cindi McDonald
Scribe Staff

A coordinating committee established to recruit new students for the fall recently completed a three-day phonathon.

Under the direction of Admissions Dean Donald Kern, the phonathon was conducted before spring vacation to contact prospective freshman students.

According to Kern, this was the first year Admissions used student involvement. In previous years, all the calls were made by the Admissions staff.

"The Admissions staff was able to answer particular questions," Kern said, "but, the voice of a University student shows the prospective student that someone is indeed interested in him."

Prospective students for the Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, Education and Fine Arts, were contacted, Kern noted. The College of Engineering and the Junior College conducted their own phonathon using their faculty and staff, Kern added.

A total of 753 calls were made with 77 indicating they were coming here, while 234 were undecided and 426 said they were going elsewhere.

Sixteen calls could not be completed because of faulty phone numbers.

Twelve students volunteered to make calls at home, Kern said.

Reasons for not attending the University were not generally stated, Kern said. In a few cases where information was given, their reasons included a dislike of the campus; others found it too expensive or preferred another college.

Kern saw the program as being helpful, but at the same time Admissions is still unsure of how many students will enroll.

One of the members on the Recruitment committee was Mary Ann Collins, Student Council vice-president.

Collins noted that although the program was established as a total University effort, not one faculty member or administrator showed up at the phonathon.

"I am particularly upset about this," Collins said. "It's been happening too often."

However, Kern said further recruitment plans include having another phonathon involving the administration, faculty and students calling those people not reached during the first phonathon.

Ex-Scribe editors 'marked excellent'

By Walter Zaborowski
Scribe staff

"The University Administration is negotiating a contract with Sikorsky Aircraft corporation to lease three campus buildings to 55 Iranian soldiers and officers, the Scribe has learned."

This was the lead paragraph of a story by two former Scribe managing editors which won them the "Mark of Excellence" award Saturday during the annual region one meeting of Sigma Delta Chi, the Society of Professional Journalists in Rochester, N.Y.

It is now eligible for the national award.

The story, which appeared in the Feb. 25, 1975 issue of The Scribe was co-written by Neil Borowski and Daniel Rodricks.

The two heard of rumors of the leasing, which Rodricks then checked and verified through "a very reliable source." Neither would reveal the source's name.

Borowski then confronted Harry B. Rowell, Jr., University vice president with the information. Rowell confirmed it.

The award was the first ever won by a University journalism student, in Sigma Delta Chi competition.

Rodricks a senior, is currently interning as a general assignment reporter for the Baltimore Sun. Borowski has since graduated and is a City Hall reporter for the New Britain Herald.

Cinema dept. tops in festival

University Cinema students captured four of five first place awards and one runner-up during the sixth annual New England Film Festival conducted in the Recital Hall of Mertens theatre last weekend.

This is the fifth time in six festivals the University has captured more awards than any other school.

Tullio Ossa and Thomas Vanghele, took first place in the dramatic film category for "Allan," the story of a child affected by his parents' broken marriage.

"Utter, Trash," an X-rated version of a story done with clay figures captured first place in animation for Christopher Aniello.

John McCally was awarded first place in the experimental category for "Experimentu Tuo," an abstract film partially generated by computer and processed through a Blocpix color synthesizer, a new invention. McCally took first place in last year's New England Film festival for his animated "Cave Markings."

The special category award went to Mac Brown for "Larry," a film portrait of a New York actor.

The only non-University first place winner was Scott Sorensen of the Rhode Island School of Design for "To Live In Providence." Sorensen's documentary winner was a study of life and hard times in the capital of Rhode Island.

Craig Rodgers and Tom O'Neil, also of the University, captured a second place in the experimental category for "Pulse."

Other runners-up were: "Small Comforts in a Household Manner," dramatic category, by Jean DeSegonzac of the Rhode Island School of Design; "Happy Black Holes," dramatic science fiction, by Richard Bernstein of Wesleyan; "I wave Back," a documentary by Thomas Payne, of the Rhode Island School of Design "Case Mates," animation, by Richard Scanca of the Yale Graduate School; "Please State your Name," experimental animation, by Steve Oakes of Hampshire College and "Jessica Look at Me," a documentary by Robert Ross and Joan Freeman of the Harvard Graduate School.

An award for the best super-8 film went to Ian Wollen, of Yale, for his silent experimental study entitled "Letters to Janus."

The festival is hosted by a different school each year. It was co-sponsored by the Student Council and the Cinema Guild. Warren Bass, chairman of the University's Cinema department, acted as the festival's director.

This year 18 colleges and universities entered the festival. Others participating were: M.I.T., Boston University, Dartmouth, University of Massachusetts, Emerson College and New York University.

Judges for the festival were Pamela Yates from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst; Newton Sigel from Hampshire Colleges; Thomas Ruegger, of Dartmouth; and Richard Sanca, of Yale.

Also, Shalom Gorewitz of the Center for Understanding Media, and Susan Rubin, of Harvard and the University Film Study Center in Massachusetts.

All films were judged on concept, technique, and artistic quality with scores ranging from 1 (poor) to 50 (excellent). Average scores were used to determine the winners.

Miles to propose tuition aid plan May 3

By Walter Zaborowski
Scribe Staff

A tuition assistance program designed to increase the number of Connecticut residents attending private colleges here will be proposed by University President Leland Miles during the May 3 meeting of the Connecticut Conference of Independent Colleges.

If approved by the Conference, Miles will then submit the Plan to the state's General Assembly, according to William Allen, assistant to the President.

Allen, acting as spokesman for Miles, said the President is currently on a "very tight" schedule from now until commencement.

The plan is based on a program used in New York, Allen said. Under Miles' plan, the state would subtract the tuition standardized cost of a public college from the tuition costs of the desired private college. The state would then pay half the difference, while the student would pay the remainder.

Allen said the standardized cost would have to be worked out.

Only state residents attending private colleges in Connecticut would be eligible under the plan, Allen explained. He added that additional state financial aid may be available to them.

Allen described Miles' plan as "long range" and recognized two major obstacles before its final approval.

The financial situation of Connecticut is the most important problem, Allen said.

According to Allen, politics in the General Assembly will be the other major obstacle. He said it would take a long time "acquainting legislators with the concept" and persuading them to enact it.

Dermoddy said the plan would primarily help middle income families. Both he and Allen agree it will enable the state school system to act more efficiently.

State schools are currently turning students away because they neither have the facilities nor the manpower, the financial aid director said. He said the burden would be eased by making private schools more accessible.

Allen said the total cost of operating state schools is far greater than that of private schools, which are run more efficiently.

6-2 Softball team to take on Trenton Tournament

The University of Bridgeport women's softball team will meet host Trenton State College today (April 29) at 11:30 a.m. in a first-round game of the first Eastern Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women tournament at Trenton, N.J.

The Purple Knights, coached by Amateur Softball Association Hall of Famer Rosemary (Miki) Stratton, were among 16 of the region's strongest schools selected to compete in the three-day event which ends Saturday. Bridgeport will carry a 6-2 record in to the tournament. The Purple Knights list Eastern Connecticut, King's, New Haven, Connecticut, Western Connecticut and Fairfield as victims thus far while losses have come at the hands of Southern Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Other schools chosen and seeded in the top eight places in the tournament are West Chester, East Stroudsburg, Springfield, Montclair State, Delaware, Trenton State, Temple, and Salisbury State.

Non-seeded teams, in addition to Bridgeport, are Kean State, Rutgers, Barrington, Lehman, Brockport State, Patterson State, and Hofstra.

The Purple Knights' pitching staff has been headed by Jill MacDiarmid, a sophomore from Bethany, Conn., who has five out of the six victories. The leading Bridgeport hitters have been catcher Chris Ognan, a senior from New Milford, Conn., and Lois Consiglio, a freshman infielder from Scarsdale, N.Y.

Fairfield Victimized

According to the schedule, the woman's softball team should have played two games before departing for the softball regional tourney in Trenton yesterday. However, the women's softball team found itself rained out of one game and winning the other by forfeit.

The forfeit came Tuesday when the squad was to play Fairfield University on away turf. When the Bridgeport women arrived at Fairfield in time for the 3:30 game, the Fairfield equipment manager hadn't arrived with the equipment which left them without, among other things,

Tag Springfield 4-0 tag Knights saddle 7th

For the first time in the last seven years, the University of Bridgeport baseball team defeated Springfield College with a 4-0 win Tuesday.

Scoring four runs in their half of the second inning, the Knights, who were also awarded a forfeiture victory from Adelphi due to an ineligible player recorded their seventh win against 12 losses.

The Knights traveled to Southern Connecticut state, barring any rain; yesterday, and will be seeking revenge against Fairfield tomorrow in a 3 p.m., Seaside park game. Bridgeport lost to Fairfield 6-4 earlier this year.

In the Springfield contest, it was the four hit pitching of junior righthander Vito Savo that held the Massachusetts rival scoreless. Savo, now 2-2 on the season, struck out five and walked four as Springfield's George Ross (3-2) was charged with the loss.

In that second inning, catcher Mark Windsor, Tom Kulowski, firstbaseman John Harper all led off with consecutive singles. Thirdbaseman Rich Cintron followed with a single scoring Windsor and Kulowski which left men on first and third, and then with one out freshman leftfielder Don Pouliot lined a single to right center scoring both runners.

Freshman shortstop Gary Churchill followed Pouliot with a single putting two men on but Phil Nastu struck out and Randy Chevalier flied out to end the inning.

The Knights, who recorded 13 hits off of Ross—charted as Springfield's number one arm, also threatened in the bottom of the eighth when John Harper doubled to left with two outs. Cintron, who like Harper, went two for four from the plate, then singled putting men on first and third but Ross struck out the next batter to end the inning.

Bridgeport finished with 13 hits, one walk while four batters were struck out. Savo, who now has won two in a row, went the full nine innings for Bridgeport while putting on a startling display of stopping line drives with his bare hand. The ex-Notre Dame high school standout did, however, suffer some swelling and a possible broken finger in stopping the low liners aimed in his direction.

In the Adelphi University decision handed down by the ECAC earlier this week, Bridgeport, who split a doubleheader with the New York school on April 10, was awarded the win after a ruling on shortstop Bill Gaffney.

Though the reasons for his ineligibility were not available at Press time, it was reported that the team was forced to forfeit all seven of its wins.

Water ski tourney May 22

The American Water Ski Association (ASWA) will hold a ski competition for amateur skiers in Massachusetts on May 22. Senior Ed Kost, a management Industrial Relations major, participated in the collegiate tournament last year. This year, he is looking for a group of students to represent the University in the competition.

An $8.00 participation fee is required. "You pay to ski," Kost explained. "They have the boats. It's some really good skiing."

There are two divisions in competition—a man's division and a women's division. Judging is in three events: slalom, tricking, and jumping.

"You can get high honors in each one or overall," Kost said. Trophies are awarded, he added.

Slalom skiing is done on one ski on a six buoy course. Kost compared it to the slalom snow skiing seen on TV.

For tricking, the skier wears a short "trick" ski and performs tricks or stunts such as complete turns.

Jumping is just that, going off a ski jump.

Anyone interested can contact Kost at 261-2472 or Jerry Silvestro, director of Men's intramurals, at ext. 4722.
